

After Julmania, camelmania or dromamania without diplomatic incidents: 2024, the year of the camelids according to the UN

In Paris, camels and dromedaries banned from parading on the Champs-Élysées were finally allowed to go to the Bois de Vincennes. "...objects of entertainment" and "common food resources"

"They're very affectionate and cuddly." The dromedary, the new trendy pet that can still be used. "It's so endearing, it has a face and an aura that immediately seduced me!..." "You imagine the animal living in the desert oases, free, but not at all. It has always been domesticated since Antiquity. The Gauls used them in their vineyards for traction, but also as food." A dromedary costs around €4,000 to purchase, and you don't need a specific permit to own one. All you need is a large plot of land, patience, and a love of animals.

A virtuous solution to replace mechanical equipment in the fields, but do their farts produce as much as cows?

The price of camel meat per kilo in France. At home, be careful of space in the marital bed or on the living room sofa; it's a bit bigger than Raminagrobis or Rintintin.

The answer from methanizer farts.

For entertainment: A dromedary race on the track at the Abbeville racecourse (Somme) this summer.

And the latest news: the birth of a critically endangered wild camel calf in the Guerno Animal and Botanical Park in Morbihan. (actu.fr)

And still in Brittany, La Dépêche de Brest reports that a high mortality rate is affecting camels due to the abuse of these good animals, but the authorities are keeping a close eye on it and have enacted measures to "prevent the loss of the camel herd."

No recipes from Bignole